

ABOUT US

In 1905 Abbot Kinney built Venice-of-America, as a personal monument to Venice, Italy. By the end of the construction of this fabulous dream, he had given the people of Los Angeles a fantasy city. Everybody loved it! William Randolph Hearst and Marion Davies strolled the Venice Boardwalk; Sarah Bernhardt performed in the Venice Auditorium; Charlie Chaplin clowned in Abbot Kinney's auto races; and Mary Pickford was rowed in her own gondola. Venice was the place to be!

The building that now houses the Sidewalk Café was one of the last of Abbot Kinney's Venice buildings and was originally designed to be four stories tall, but only the first floor was ever constructed. It was sold to the Harrah family (of gambling fame) and was turned into a bingo parlor (called Budgo because bingo was illegal). During prohibition underground tunnels were built to accommodate bootleggers. In the 1950's and early '60's the building housed artists' studios and served as the crash pad for beatnik poets such as Jack Kerouac. Before the Goodfaders bought it in 1976, the vacant building had stood abandoned for almost 20 years.

In 1976 Mary Goodfader's bookstore, Small World Books, lost its lease in Marina Del Rey. Bob Goodfader, while bicycling on the bike path saw the building and called the number painted on its front. The Goodfaders and their friends, Walter (Skip) and Penny Dixon bought the building for the bookstore. Bob and Skip decided to open a small takeout place in the side not in use by the bookstore. The restaurant was such a hit that they reopened as a patio restaurant. Ever since, The Sidewalk Café has been the best place to enjoy the Venice Boardwalk. The Sidewalk Café has a full production kitchen. We grind our own beef for our delicious burgers and many of our dressings, soups and sauces are made from scratch.

We're really glad you're here. If we've done something to make your day special, please tell a friend. And if there is something we can do to improve, please let us know!
